One of Cartawick's most famous pieces is her Women's Regalia Fancy Shawl. The shawl is made from a soft, lightweight fabric and is adorned with intricate beadwork and quillwork. The design features a colorful geometric pattern that is both eye-catching and meaningful.

Cartawick created the Women's Regalia Fancy Shawl as a way to celebrate the beauty and resilience of her heritage. The shawl is inspired by the traditional regalia worn by Native American women at powwows and other ceremonies. Cartawick's shawl is a modern interpretation of this traditional garment, and it is both beautiful and meaningful.

The Design of the Women's Regalia Fancy Shawl

The Women's Regalia Fancy Shawl is a masterpiece of craftsmanship. The shawl is made from a single piece of fabric, and the beadwork and quillwork are all hand-sewn. The design of the shawl is complex and intricate, yet it is also balanced and harmonious.

The center of the shawl features a large, circular medallion. The medallion is surrounded by a series of smaller circles, and the entire design is outlined with a row of tiny beads. The medallion is filled with a variety of colorful beads, and the quillwork adds a delicate touch to the design.

The border of the shawl is also adorned with beadwork and quillwork. The border features a series of geometric patterns, and the colors are carefully chosen to complement the design of the medallion.

The Meaning of the Women's Regalia Fancy Shawl

The Women's Regalia Fancy Shawl is more than just a beautiful piece of art. The shawl is also a symbol of the beauty and resilience of Native American women. The shawl is a reminder of the strength and courage of Native American women, and it is a testament to their ability to overcome adversity.
